

Just to let you know...

Dear Parents,

This weekend we are asking the children to write a diary linked to our class reading book; Aquila. They need to imagine they are Geoff or Tom. What would they do with Aquila for the day? They need to write a diary entry to tell us about all their adventures!

Don't forget time connectives, thoughts and feelings.

Best wishes,

Julia, James and Jo

Spellings of the Week

inactive, inexpensive, inconsiderate, inexperience, incorrect, incomplete, indefinite, incapable

Extension: Two of their own!

That's an order: Write your spelling words out in alphabetical order, whilst practising your handwriting tool

In English, we have been writing estate agent brochures for our very own Roman villas.

The children have included their knowledge of how the Romans lived and how their villas were designed. They have also used fronted adverbials to describe the features of their villa.

The children have been researching Roman villas and learning about all the different rooms that the Romans had in their living spaces. They have also learnt some of the Latin names for them...why not ask your child what they are?

In maths this week we have been using our knowledge of direction, coordinates and measuring to create our own town maps. The children have been setting each other direction and coordinate questions.

Perhaps together you could find out what direction your house faces?

This week try the following link for your child to practise their understanding using coordinates:

<http://www.oswego.org/ocsd-web/games/BillyBug/bugcoord.html>

