

Just to let you know...

We also looked at some of the worst jobs in Tudor times, which made us all glad that they're not in existence any more! Ask your children to explain about the more repulsive ones, which included: gong farmer, executioner, woad dyer and violin string maker.

The children then wrote persuasive job adverts for one of these jobs.

Dear Parents,
We enjoyed meeting you and reflecting on your children's progress during the parent consultations this week.

The children have been given pieces of music, please encourage them to practise this on the clarinet.

Next week we shall be competing in the House football tournament during our games lesson, so please ensure PE kits are in school.

We're off to Neasden Temple on Wednesday 5th December. Please let your child's teacher know if you'd like to help.

Thanks!
Bec, Henry and Mary

In maths this week, we have been looking at the properties of 3D shape and nets, in preparation for the DT day.

Every child has been given a password and username for Mathletics—please make sure you've had a look at it. We've had great feedback so far and would love to know what you think.

We had a fabulous DT day on Wednesday where the children worked hard to design and make their own Tudor house. They were incredibly motivated and produced some great work. We'll put some pictures on the website.

Group reading is still going well. Thanks for all your support! It will start at 9.30am again next Thursday.

Remember to keep up the regular reading aloud and looking at your child's reading targets (in the home school book) at home too!

As part of our Tudor topic we considered the legacy left to us by William Shakespeare. The children met some witches in the woods and looked at the famous scene from Macbeth then had a go at acting it out and writing their own version.

Our spellings this week are homophones, so it's really important that children learn the meaning of each word. The list is: there, their, they're, weather, whether, bored, board, sure, shore, practise, practice, allowed, aloud, patience, patients. There'll be a little test on Monday.
