‘It’s for your own good, Toady,’ went on the Rat. ‘You know you must change, you simply must turn over a new leaf sooner or later and now seems a splendid time to begin; a sort of turning-point in your life. Please don’t think that saying all this doesn’t hurt me more than it hurts you!’

Toad remained a long while plunged in thought.

At last he raised his head and the traces of strong emotion were visible on his features. 'You have conquered my friends,' he said in broken accents.

'You are right, I know and I am wrong. Henceforth I will be a very different Toad.'

What would you
